State and county officials share how they'll work together to rebuild relationships

MANDAN, ND – Prior to the Dakota Access Pipeline protest, Morton County Commission Chairman Cody Schulz and North Dakota Indian Affairs Commission Executive Director Scott Davis crossed paths in their professional roles and as Morton County residents. Over the past six months, the protest response has caused them to function in a more meaningful way, and they will work together to find opportunities to rebuild relationships that have been wounded due to clashes between the tribe and Morton County.

In this "Know the Truth" video, Schulz and Davis explain how their roles have overlapped throughout the protest response and how they've leaned on each other to approach challenges when emotions run high.
